HIPAA Compliance is a Vital Requirement for Healthcare Providers

Compliance with the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) is a core requirement of the stakeholders involved in health information.

HIPAA has prescribed standards with which to protect critical data relating to patients. Electronic Health Records (EHRs) are important documents that contain sensitive patient data, and are thus considered Protected Health Information (PHI). Since this data is accessible to a number of players involved in the field of healthcare, it is extremely important to set regulatory guidelines aimed at ensuring that patient information remains protected. HIPAA compliance is essentially about staying in compliance with these guidelines.

Measures Needed to Show Compliance with HIPAA

HIPAA requires a healthcare organization dealing with PHI to implement all of the following measures and comply with them:

- Physical measures
- Network measures, and
- Process security measures

HIPAA compliance is one of the biggest areas of question, concern and overall success of medical professionals. We can talk all day long about the changes, new EHR rules, security requirements and risk threats your practice may need to watch out for – but without a clear plan or process, your practice may already be on the wrong track to HIPAA compliance.

Orchestrate Healthcare is uniquely positioned to bring healthcare organizations into HIPAA compliance with the tools, resources, and experience of our Information Security practice team. At any time, a business partner or regulatory agency can ask you to provide proof that you are HIPAA compliant. Don’t leave yourself at risk!
